

ARTUR FRIDMAN

I spent years working on the floor in service businesses. Places where experience is the product. This really shaped how I think about strategy and design now.

And then I spent other years implementing strategies and making people follow the guides. That shaped my understanding of what is working and what is just beautiful words on paper.

When I work with a founder, I start with their customers. How they choose, what they feel, why they come back or don't. And from there – everything is interesting. Revenue models, operational logic, brand mechanics, creative direction, problem solving, you name it!

SELECTED PROJECTS

Proyecto Indigeno / USA+Ecuador

A 7-day, all-inclusive ayahuasca retreat program in Ecuador. The category tends to attract a very specific esoteric crowd, but I built the brand to reach further than that, positioning it around life change and self-discovery rather than ritual and mysticism. Identity, positioning, website, marketing strategy. From concept to launch in under three months.

Union / Cringe / Georgia

The project was losing about 40k GEL a month. I went through the numbers and it was clear the business couldn't survive in its current form. I gave them two options: close it or rebuild it from the ground up. They chose to rebuild. Alongside with the team we defined the new concept, then I rebuilt the positioning and brand around it. Four months later it was breaking even, and it's close to turning a profit.

Bobo / USA

A bar catering startup with a strong instinct but no real market picture yet. I mapped the market, found the gaps, and ran a strategy session with the founders to turn that into a direction they could actually build on.

Arak Keter / Russia

A market launch for an alcohol brand in a niche and barely-known category. I handled the full creative side: identity, packaging, photography, advertising. And worked out the positioning and strategy for entering international markets.

Goldman Group / Russia

I joined Goldman Group as a waiter in 2015, worked my way through floor and management roles, then moved into marketing – at the time the company had one bar. Over the next few years I helped open four more venues, building the company, brand, and marketing for each from scratch. I put together a 10-person team along the way – design, marketing, content – and ran it: hiring, career paths, processes, the works. I also stayed hands-on with design and art direction myself, and brought in over 50M RUB in sponsorship deals. Two of the projects ended up on international Top 50 lists. Combined, these businesses run at around 400M RUB a year

TOOLS

Figma and Adobe for design, Framer or ReadyMag for web, spreadsheets for pretty much everything else (analysis, planning, you name it), Notion and Asana to keep projects organized, plus AI tools across the board, from research to vibe coding to content
